

SELECTED PROJECTS HIGHER EDUCATION

Duke University
 Bostock Library
 Durham, NC

Opened in October 2005 and comprising five floors of services and collections configured to create an environment conducive to study, learning and research. Special features include the two-story Carpenter Reading Room and the Center for Instructional Technology. Integral to the relationship between Bostock and Perkins Library is the gateway, which joins the two buildings, and the Perkins Tower. The three levels of the gateway, with windows overlooking the campus, are furnished with chairs and study tables. The Perkins Tower features a meeting room, a classroom, and additional study space. Total size is 122,275 SF (includes the Perkins Tower) and had an approximate construction cost of $30.0M.

New, four-story, 52,000 SF building occupies a prominent site facing Mount Hope Bay on one side, and completing the main campus green space on the other side. A bold curved form facing the quad leads to framed views of the bay, while a broad entrance allows glimpses into and through a three-story atrium at the heart of the building. The program includes eleven classrooms, a multimedia production studio, and faculty offices for several academic departments. The atrium serves as a major campus public space for events, celebrations and exhibits. Building received LEED Silver Certification. It was completed in 2009 with an approximate construction cost of $20.0M.
